

The Conversation Africa has a new editor

The Conversation Africa has appointed Jabulani Sikhakhane as its new editor of the online title, taking over from Caroline Southey who will assume the role of founding editor.

Sikhakhane is a former financial journalist and has also worked for National Treasury and the South African Reserve Bank. He previously worked as deputy editor and editor of economic and business coverage, where he helped establish the site as a respected and trustworthy media player on the continent.
